G

G es la séptima letra del alfabeto Británico, y se pronuncia en Inglés, como en Castellano, delante de las vocales a o u, esto es como la Gamma de los Griegos pero la G, delante de las vocales e i tiene un sonido en Inglés, de que no se halla similitud alguno en la lengua Española; solo se puede explicar y dársele a entender algo de aquella pronunciación diciendo que su mecanismo es el mismo como el de las sílabas che chi, en Español pero no tan fuerte y suavizando quanto se puede el sonido, no obstante hay muchas voces en que la G delante de la e y de la i se pronuncia como la Gamma Griega, o como delante de la o en Español.

1º en todos los nombres y participios que derivan, de los verbos, cuyo infinitivo acaba con la letra G, como finger, finging, del verbo to sing, y del verbo to hang, las voces hanged, hanger, hanging.

2º en los comparativos y superlativos de los adjetivos que acaban con G como de big, bigger, biggest, y de strong, stronger, strongest, y en algunas otras voces.

3º G no se pronuncia, delante de la n como en sovereign, foreign, reign, feign, daign; y muy poco suena delante de los participios y substantivos que acaban en ing, como en loving, understanding, spelling, en quanto al diptongo g b, hablaremos de el en su lugar.

O

O Es la letra decima quarta del alphabeto Inglés y la quarta de los vocales.

La O se pronuncia casi siempre como en castellano, pero se debe pronunciar larga, quando se le figure una consonante con una e final como en globe, robe, mode, drone, exceptuando las palabras siguientes en que la e no se fueña a saber en come, some, done, purpose, Europe, &c. Lo mismo sucede en las voces cuya terminacion ve toma el sonido de una f como en love, glove, dove, above.

Ademas de esto hay muchas voces en que la o tiene un sonido que se acerca mucho de el de la a, lo que sucede.

1º En el principio de estas dicciones, a saber, obdurate, object, obstacle, obstinate, to occupy, odd, of, off, offer, office, oft, to often, olive, omelot, omnibus, on, to operate, optative, optick, option, or, oracle, orange, oratory, orle, orchard, order, ordure, organ, orifice, ornament, orphan, orpiment, orthodox, oscitancy, osprey, ostrary, ostrich, otter, ox, y sus derivados ò derivativos.

2º En otras muchas voces en que con la o se acaba la primera ò segunda syllaba a saber en las palabras body, comedy, comet, imposthume, modest, apothecary, apostacy, &c.

3º Entre dos ò tres consonantes, quando forman con la o una misma syllaba como God, rod, box, rock, long, horn, bodkin, cesser, cotton, &c. y es menester observar que en este caso la o se pronuncia un poco larga en las voces que acaban en orn como horn, corn, &c. de esta regla se exceptuan 1º las voces que acaban en ll, id & it, en que la o se pronuncia larga. Ex. roll, toll, bold, cold, bolt, coat; a que se añaden port, sport, fort; no obitante loll and droll se pronuncian lull, drall.

2. Los participios de los verbos que se terminan en ear al infinitivo, como stern, swern, de los verbos, to scuar and to wear.

3. Estas voces en que se pronuncia larga, comb, both, most, ghost, post, rest, toll. Sin embargo es breve en coxcomb, y en los derivados de most, hithermost, furthestmost, uppermost, undermost.

Born se pronuncia börn quando significa llevado & born quando nacido.

Enfin la o se pronuncia muy poco, al fin de las voces que acaban con una consonante antes de on, como capon, nutton, lesson, reason, reason, &c.

Exceptuando son, con, cannon, sermon, abandon, y algunos otros en que la O se pronuncia fuerte.

Pero la O es como muda en fashion, ashion, punchion, y otros semejantes.
